

You Can Quote Us That

President & CEO Julie Fry:

“These films all do what documentaries do best—they take us places we might otherwise not have gone and allow us the opportunity to better understand the struggles and successes of others.”

“California Humanities continues to support films and interactive media projects that share stories of California and help us better understand our past, present, and future.”

“California Humanities is proud to support such a stunning variety of stories from across the state. By giving voice to stories that are often not heard, and bringing people together through humanities-based explorations, these projects can help us better understand each other in a critical moment in history.”

“Libraries have long been a natural partner to us.”
