

ON THE ROAD

WITH CALIFORNIA
HUMANITIES

THE PULITZER PRIZE CENTENNIAL CAMPFIRES INITIATIVE

The Pulitzer Prizes

The On the Road with California Humanities series features Pulitzer Prize winners in dialogue with notable thinkers and the community, examining contemporary issues to guide California along the path to a vibrant future.

Journalism and Democracy in California

June 16, 2016 – 7:00pm – San Jose State University Student Union Theater

Whether through its pioneering alternative weeklies, to its powerful big city daily newspapers, to its rapidly expanding collection of online news sites, California journalism has a long and proud history. Now, in a time of dramatic economic and demographic shifts, journalism is more essential than ever to California's civic life. Yet the business and the craft of news reporting itself is said to be in crisis. What is the future of journalism in the very state that's given the world the information revolution of apps and social media? How is investigative, government and culture reporting evolving, and what new stories are California journalists tackling across the state?

Mark Arax

Award-winning journalist and author (Fresno)

Frances Dinkelspiel

Award-winning author and journalist (Berkeley)

Rob Kuznia

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist (2015) and writer (Los Angeles)

Héctor Tobar

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist (1993) and author (Los Angeles)

